Help For The Migrant

Corpsmen Work In Andover

(A TOWNSMAN News Feature)

What is it like to spend three-quarters of every productive year of your life away from home, family and friends, working for a stranger, living in temporary quarters, apart from the community?

To begin to comprehend what sacrifices are necessary for a great many people who struggle to provide for a better way of life, you have to become as involved as the Commonwealth Service Corps men with the problems of the migrant farm worker. It is this involvement that has made missionaries of them. Throughout Massachusetts Corpsmen are at work this summer to improve the lot of the 4,000 Puerto Rican laborers who stream into the state each spring to help correct the imbalance between the farm labor supply and the demand. Their efforts are not always regarded with enthusiasm. In some instances the farmers are hostile and almost always the community is uninformed about and frequently indifferent to the plight of these not-so-temporary residents.

Plagued with fewer of these problems than some are the 18 Corpsmen who work out of a center established in Peabody House at Phillips Academy. From here these volunteers span out to cover farms located in Lawrence, Methuen, North Andover, North Reading, Stoneham, Rowley, West Newbury, West Boxford and Ipswich, as well as those operating in Andover.

They are back-stopped in their work as language, health education and citizenship tutors by 41 student volunteers from Phillips Academy.

In Andover alone they work with eight farmers and some 90 Puerto Ricans toward the broad goal of mutual respect and understanding.

Their more specific aim is to acquaint these migrant laborers

Hearing To Resolve Teacher Union Issue

Time To Register For Primary Vote

Prospective voters will have a last-chance opportunity Saturday to register in time for the Sept. 13 primary election.

The clerk's office at Town Hall will be open from noon to 10 p.m. for registration of voters from any local precinct.

People who cannot make this special registration session, may sign up at the clerk's office during regular hours today and Friday.

Pollution Topic For GL Officials

Four Andover selectmen will be among Greater Lawrence officials attending a dinner meeting at Andover Country Club tonight for a discussion of disagreements over how a Merrimack pollution abatement project should be handled.

Missing will be Manager Richard Bowen who said this week that he is not interested in attending any more meetings for re-discussion of matters already considered by a four-community pollution abatement committee.

The meeting was called by Lawrence Mayor Daniel Kiley. The mayor said Wednesday that he does not intend to make any specific proposal for settling the differences of opinion over representation for a district sewer commission or the financing process.

The Andover Teachers Assn. has forced the School Committee's hand on the teacher representation issue by petitioning on its own for a Labor Relations Commission hearing.

The committee was notified this week that a hearing has been scheduled for Sept. 28 at 10:30 in the Essex County Superior Court-house, Lawrence. It was further warned to expect a visit from a Commission examiner who will make a check of the payroll to see whether or not the Teachers Assn. can claim sufficient representation to meet state requirements under the new collective bargaining law for municipal employees. Alfonso M. D'Apuzzo, executive secretary for the state agency said in his letter that it has been the policy of the commission to require 30 percent representation by cards or other means as an indication that employees wish to be represented by a petitioning union.

Bruce L. MacDonald, president of the local organization for school department professionals, said this week that the association requested the hearing in order to force settlement of the question in time for pre-budget salary bargaining.

The association asked the School Committee to give it official recognition early in July and presented a stack of 187 authorization cards which it said were voluntarily signed by teachers who wish to be represented by the ATA. MacDonald told the committee then that the association had proof that it speaks for 84% of the professionals and that there were still others who actually support the

White Herd To Be Sold

Dairyman Sidney P. White of Ballardvale, an Andover selectman, confirmed this week that his prize Wild Rose Farm Dairy herd will be auctioned off at a public sale Sept. 8.

White said that as reluctant as he is to disrupt a farm operation that has been in existence for 38 years, he cannot continue with the pure-bred Holstein herd at this time because of his inability to find qualified personnel to handle the animals. He reports that in recent months he has contacted schools and colleges, and employment agencies and advertised widely in an attempt to find someone to help keep the local dairy farm going.

The selectman said Wednesday that the dispersing of the 76-animal herd will in no way affect his dairy bar business. He said he intends to bring in high quality milk from up country in order to continue that phase of his operation.

White's barn on Andover Street has become a community landmark and a favorite spot for youngsters, many of whom have had their first look at a cow in this "cow palace."

Two full-time men are now employed at the farm, but the youngest of the two - 20-year-old David Smith of River Road - returns to Stockbridge School of Agriculture this fall. The other, William Smeltzer, is 82 years old.

White said Wednesday that if Smith is available after his graduation from college and interested in continuing at Wild Rose, he will build a new herd and resume his dairy farm activities.

Tradition Preserved

A former Andover man perpetuated a long family tradition by signing on as a fire fighter with the Fort Lauderdale (Fla.) Fire Department this week.

William G. Coutts Jr., 25, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William G. Coutts of 13 Henderson Ave. and Florida. The senior Coutts retired February a year ago as a lieutenant with the Andover Fire

Young Coutts' grandfather, Henry L. Hilton Sr., was a deputy chief of the same department and the present Andover chief, Henry L. Hilton, is his uncle.

The new fire fighter's paternal grandfather, David L. Coutts was with Smith & Coutts, for many years printers of the Andover TOWNSMAN.

In the middle 1800s, the prevailing public attitude toward wetlands was that they were obstacles to land development. Landowners were subsidized to convert seemingly unproductive wetlands to agricultural use.

organization. The committee, however, delayed recognition, it asked for advice from Town Counsel Frederic S. O'Brien on the legality of the agreement proposed by the ATA, and further requested his opinion about what the outcome would likely be if the Committee were to decide to ask the State Labor Relations Commission to hold an election to resolve the issue. Such legal opinions have not yet been reported.

Spokesmen for the teachers association and the Massachusetts Teachers Assn. said then that the Commission would require more than proof of 30% representation in Andover since no other organization is bidding for the right to bargain for the school staff here. Though Chairman Louis Galbraith said at the time that he did not challenge the association's contention that it had obtained authorization signatures without coercion, he added that he did not believe individual teachers could feel entirely free of pressure when cards were distributed through the schools and it could easily be determined who had not signed.

Both he and former chairman Robert Sherman were strong in taking the position that the School Committee should know precisely how many teachers the association represents.

The classification of department heads has been another point of disagreement. The School Committee majority has taken the position that in Andover department heads function as administrators and should be included with principals, supervisors, directors and assistant principals. The association, on the other hand, says that department heads teach more than they administer and should bargain with classroom teachers.

School Sites Are A Worry

Fresh concern over school building needs was expressed by the School Committee this week at a special meeting held with Town Manager Richard Bowen Tuesday.

Figures were presented to School officials to show that town is already short 20 elementary classrooms and they predicted that this figure will increase by five percent annually.

Bowen reported that within a week he expects to have some better idea of what steps will be taken to secure an elementary school site in South Andover. He hopes within this time to arrange for perc tests on a Gray Road location that has been approved for acquisition by Town Meeting.

Tests on some Cottage Farm Acreage off Rocky Hill Road have proved that on-site sewage disposal there would be impossible. The Selectmen have resumed the search for still other sites in the South end, hoping to avoid the need for extension of sanitary sewer lines at this time.

Many youth also benefited from the Vocational Education Act of 1963, the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965, the Higher Education Act of 1965, and the National Defense Education Act of 1958, designed to help youth in school.

Gains in employment declines in unemployment 1965 combined to make one of the best in employment young people in almost more than a million in

An Apology For Reichhold

BCA President Says He Erred

The president of the Ballardvale Community Assn. acknowledged this week that he "erred" when he accused Reichhold Chemical Co. of polluting the Shawsheen River in a letter sent to town officials and released to the TOWNSMAN for its Aug. 4 issue.

Withdrawing his charges in a second letter, Theodore Acosta reported that after studying files at the Andover Board of Health he is convinced that his accusations were "unfounded" and "overly based on the opinions of others" and his own observation of the river rather than technical data.

He said he is satisfied that Reichhold is cooperating fully to avoid contaminating the Shawsheen and added that he believes the condition of the river is more a consequence of natural evolutionary processes" (particularly the drought) than of "human interference."

Asked for a company statement updating Reichhold's policy on river dumping, Plant Manager William DeHart said this week that the Ballardvale plant never intentionally releases anything into the river.

He added that Reichhold did release wastes into the stream until seven years ago when an elaborate lagoon system was developed for handling the problem. Now he said, Shawsheen water is used for cooling purposes only and never comes into contact with the company's products.

If anything is released in error, DeHart said the company immediately notifies local officials. He cited as an example one fairly recent occasion when two quarts of oil leaked into the river because of a faulty fuel oil line.

Reporting that Reichhold makes frequent temperature and water level checks, DeHart said the company reports to state officials when water and oxygen levels indicate that a fish kill is likely. This precaution is taken, he said, because the company does not want the blame for conditions for which it is not responsible.

Town Manager Richard Bowen said last week at the time Acosta's first letter was released that neither local nor state officials had found any evidence to support the periodic charges that the Lowell Junction chemical company is responsible for polluting the Shawsheen.

Acosta's Letter

The full text of Mr. Acosta's letter:

"Last week's TOWNSMAN published a letter I had written to Town Manager Bowen in which I accused Reichhold Chemical of ruining the Shawsheen River in Ballardvale. I now acknowledge that I erred, and that this serious, unfounded accusation was overly based on opinions of others and on my observation of the river, rather than firm technical data.

"I have, in the past week, studied some of the available factual evidence regarding the recent history of the Shawsheen. It is readily apparent from the Andover Board of Health's file of correspondence and reports dating back to 1957, that the three principal groups concerned with past investigations - Andover Board of Health, State Board of Health, and Reichhold Chemical, have all fulfilled their responsibilities by performing numerous analyses of the stream, and these tests have shown that the death of fish is not caused by chemicals from the Reichhold

"Reichhold set up an elaborate disposal system four years ago, in which toxic wastes are piped into sand banks, where the liquid percolates and/or evaporates. Further, the company tests the river water daily, and reports promptly to both town and state health officials when test results indicate a change for the worse. It appears that Reichhold was and is cooperating fully, in their thorough efforts to avoid contaminating the river.

"The best evidence at hand (consisting of the test data and the recorded opinions of town and state experts), indicates that the fish are dying from lack of oxygen, and the oxygen attrition is a result of excessive growths of vegetation like duckweed and algae. The other contributing factors are elevated summer temperatures and low water levels.

"My present belief is that the condition of the Shawsheen is less a consequence of human interference than a consequence of natural evolutionary processes, the most deleterious of which seems to be drought. Additionally, I feel that the deterioration of this once-fine waterway should be less a matter of concern of the State Board of Health, and more a responsibility of the State Department of Natural Resources, specifically the division concerned with Water Resources, Fisheries and Game, and Conservation Services. I expect that the continuing investigation by the Ballardvale Community Association will proceed on this premise."

Many Youths Are Working

Student employment rose by 100,000 in 1965 to 4.7 million, according to a special labor force report appearing in the Department of Labor's "Monthly Labor Review."

The increase was the result of a greater number of students seeking work rather than a gain in school population.

Economic expansion during 1965 was an important factor in attracting students to employment, the report shows.

Federal, State, and local programs also contributed to the increase of working students. The Neighborhood Youth Corps, under which youth, ages 16-21, earn money so that they can remain in or return to school, accounted for 80,000 youth who combined a work-study program last year.

Many youth also benefitted from the Vocational Education Act of 1963, the Elementary and Secondary School Act of 1965, and the Higher Education Act of 1965—all designed to help youth stay in school.

Gains in employment and declines in unemployment during 1965 combined to make the year one of the best in employment for young people in almost a decade. More than a million individuals 14 to 24 years old were working in October 1965 than a year earlier.

Nearly all of the over-the-year increase in employment was among white persons. The unemployment rate for nonwhite students was double that for the white students.

Andover To Benefit From $32,900 Grant

Andover is to benefit by an undetermined amount from a $32,900 grant awarded by the Economic Development Administration to help finance economic growth plans in Southeastern and Northeastern sections of the state for one year.

Gov. John A. Volpe announced the award last week.

The total cost of the plans will be $46,000, Wolpe said, because the Massachusetts Department of Commerce and Development will provide an additional $13,000 in the way of personnel services and supplies.

The Governor said the funds will permit a number of activities to go forward in developing the economic growth plans of 10 redevelopment areas and 10 areas involved under Title I of the Economic Opportunity Act.

The activities include: additional analytical work to better define district boundaries; needed liaison and negotiations among counties and municipalities to achieve local agreement on district boundaries; assistance in establishing a formal organization for the various districts; obtaining and developing information needed by the district organizations to start on their development plans; and finding the necessary staff.

The redevelopment areas covered under the grant include: Bourne, Wareham, Fall River, Somerset, Swansea, Westport, Gloucester, Essex, Rockport, Lowell, Billerica, Chelmsford, Dracut, Tewksbury, Tyngsboro, Westford, Newburyport, Amesbury, Ipswich, Newbury, Rowley, Salisbury, Plymouth, Kingston, Plympton, Provincetown and Truro.

FRANCIS JUDD COOKE, seated, and Robert Koff, discuss the selection to be presented by the New England Conservatory of Music's Chamber Ensembles at the Summer School at Castle Hill on Aug. 17.

Concert Schedule Detailed

The summer-long series of free concerts by students of the New England Conservatory of Music's Summer School at Castle Hill will enter its final week Aug. 14. Concerts are scheduled every evening through Thursday at the spacious Crane Estate.

Monday, Aug. 15, at 8:30 p.m., James Miller will present a voice recital in the Great Hall. He will sing selections by Purcell, Bach, Schubert, DuParc, Faure, Massenet and Benjamin Britten. A Conservatory graduate student, Miller recently played the lead role of Albert in "Albert Herring", an opera written by Benjamin Britten and produced by the Summer School and the Castle Hill Festival. A clarinet recital will be given by William Wrzesien on Tuesday, Aug. 16 at 8:30 p.m. in the Great Hall. A native of Chicopee, Wrzesien will play selections by Weber, Martinu, Stravinsky and Mozart. This performance marks the student's debut.

The final Wednesday Evening Musicale to be given by the Conservatory Chamber Ensembles this summer will commence at 8:30 p.m. on Wednesday, Aug. 17, under the direction of Robert Koff and Francis Judd Cooke. Works by Bach, Praetorius, and Susato, as well as a group of French Madrigals will be featured. Seventeen musicians, comprising a renaissance-style orchestra and chorus, will use ancient instruments such as the Krumm horn, recorder, harpsichord and regal portative organ. The concert is dedicated to the memory of Conservatory faculty member Dr. Carl McKinley, who died two weeks ago.

Conservationists Meet Educators Aug. 14 - 28

Educators and conservation personnel from all states of the Union will converge on Bridgewater State College August 14 through 18 for the 13th annual conference of the Conservation Education Assn. The association's president, who will open the conference Monday at 9:00 a.m., is Dr. Wilson Clark, of Eastern Montana State College, Billings, Montana.

Hosted by the Massachusetts Audubon Society and the Massachusetts Advisory Committee for Conservation Education, the meeting will feature such speakers as Massachusetts Commissioner of Education Dr. Owen Kiernan, Commissioner of Natural Resources Charles Foster, and keynote Roland Clement, staff biologist of the National Audubon Society. Red Chaplin, information-education chief of the Massachusetts Division of Fisheries and Game, is chairman of the Monday afternoon session titled "The Massachusetts Story." Chuck Roth, education director of the Massachusetts Audubon Society, is conference chairman.

Among topics to be covered during the four day meeting are "The New Conservation - Its Challenge to Education," "Conservation Commissions in Massachusetts," "The Land-Trust Approach," "Information for Private Action," "Lobbying for Conservation," "Education and Action for the Urbanite," "Conservation Education for all Ages," "Population Education," "Pollution Education," "Open Space Education," "The Saltmarsh Story," "Teaching About Water from Kindergarten Up," "The Conservation Explorations in New York City," "Conservation Through Natural Science in Worcester, Mass.," "Extra-Curricular Approach to Conservation in the City," and a series of "how to teach conservation" workshops.

The meeting is open to the public as well as to interested groups and individuals.

Horse Show This Sunday

The First Annual Horse Show of the North Shore Prancers of Peabody will be held at the Topsfield Fair Grounds, Sunday Aug. 14, beginning at 10 a.m.

The top feature of the show will be presentation of the Gov. John A. Volpe Trophy to the high point hunter. Other trophies will be awarded to winners of the various classes of riding including English and Western, saddle seat, hunt seat, jumping and many others.

North Shore Prancers was organized about a year ago by Nicholas Femia of Four Acres Riding Academy, Peabody. The group is composed of girls and a few boys from 10 to 18 and has grown from a small nucleus to a membership of almost 60. Members come from the North Shore and also from Malden and Burlington.

An exhibition of drill team equipment will be presented by eight of the club members, some of whom have been riding less than a year.

Pony rides for the children will be provided and refreshments will be available at the Fair Grounds.

with their rights as citizens of the United States, to teach them a few simple rules and techniques for the protection of their health and to help them acquire enough skill with English to cope with everyday situations. They want the farm worker to know that he is better protected if he obeys the regulations of his country and comes to the States as a contract worker, assured of a living wage and a minimum season.

They want him to know that it is to his advantage to undertake such domestic chores as the preparation of balanced meals and house-keeping.

And they want him to know the satisfaction of being able to refer to the plants he handles by their English name, to shop in town without embarrassment over language difficulties and to communicate with his employer, man or woman.

The Center at Phillips is administered by a young Stoneham school teacher who has discovered in two years with the Corps that she has strong social work inclinations.

Daniel Worcester of North Reading, an Andover native, heads a team that is more abundantly endowed with zest and enthusiasm than facilities, equipment and materials. But Worcester, apparently devoid of the acquisitive instincts of the typical bureaucrat, regards his budgetary limitations as an advantage - a challenge. Being short of funds keeps his staff creative, he says.

Corps Progress

And what of the migrant? Is his lot improving as a result of Corps activity?

Worcester says "Yes" and there are positive indications that this is so. The present situation in Worcester's territory is this:

- There is broader acceptance of the migrant's right to a contract for the season.

- There is gradual acceptance of the fact that the Puerto Rican migrant is worth and deserves to be paid the prevailing wage of $1.25 an hour.

One of the most persistent problems that the Corps encounters in trying to improve migrant conditions is the overly long working hours. There are still farmers, Worcester reports, who will work men 10 to 13 hours a day, seven days a week.

In some instances, he says, the men themselves do not resist the chance for extra pay. In such cases it is the Corps' job to point out that the man who keeps at such a pace can break his health in a few years, cutting short his productive span.

durers. But he said that he does expect the elected officials of the four communities to "come to some resolution" of these issues at the meeting, "making it easier" for the committee to draft acceptable legislation for creation of the district.

He said he called the meeting rather than leaving it to the study committee in order to "expedite the matter."

In explaining why he does not choose to attend the conference, Manager Bowen said officials of all the communities involved now have in their hands a draft of proposed enabling legislation and a run down on the points of disagreement.

Under the impression that Mayor Kiley would make some sort of special proposal, the manager said he felt the Lawrence official should present any ideas he may have through the regional pollution abatement committee.

He pointed out that Andover is the only community that has reacted to the legislation as suggested. Late in June both the Board of Selectmen and the Finance Committee indicated that they were of a mind to "go it alone" in building filtration facilities unless the formula for capital apportionment could be altered in Andover's favor, unless one-for-one representation for the district governing board could be agreed upon and unless continuous metering could be used as the basis for figuring operating costs.

Attending tonight's meeting will be Chairman William Stewart, and Selectmen Robert A. Watters, Roger Collins and Sidney P. White.

Mrs. Sylvia Henriquez, 371 North Main St., spent her vacation in San Salvador, Central America, visiting relatives.

One Wonders

How defensible are unemployment statistics?

It is an old question, but one that is forever timely because of the numbers of pump priming projects they are used to justify.

In this area there are always disturbing reports about manufacturers who, for example, manipulate employment security laws by laying off female workers on a schedule that permits them to pad out their pays from unemployment reserves. If it is true that such on-again off-again workers are seldom interested in anything more than a part-time job, it is legitimate to question how well government statistics measure true unemployment.

Sometimes a story comes along that hits closer home: one like that told last week by Selectman Sidney P. White, who has announced that he will sell off his prize dairy herd this fall because he cannot find the personnel to keep it going.

In describing his recruiting efforts, Mr. White reports that one man he talked to turned down an offer of immediate employment because he considered it impractical to give up the $56 he is drawing each week for doing nothing at all. The former farmer drives a truck for a seasonal industry and in the summer he becomes an unemployment statistic. But how valid a statistic is he if he spurns employment, particularly in a job for which he is qualified by experience?

Once the curiosity is piqued, it is impossible not to wonder if such events are more than isolated incidents. And since unemployment benefits are paid from a kitty wholly dependent upon assessments from business and industry, it is impossible not to wonder how much capital is diverted into government hands unnecessarily.

In Anticipation

Some weeks ago the League of Women Voters launched a maximum effort campaign to bring 1,859 qualified citizens into the fold of registered voters before the deadline for the September 13 primary.

But their direct mail barrage has brought limited response. We can but anticipate that a minority will once again trickle to the polls to assume responsibility for making the decisions that will determine the course of government in the Commonwealth for the next two years.

It is easy to berate the public for its apathy. But people being what they are and politicians knowing it - we are more inclined this once to berate the office seekers, particularly those at the district level. There are issues, and candidates for top level posts are accelerating their discussion of them, but there is a disconcerting quiet on the home front.

Isn't it time we knew something about what local candidates regard as the issues and the positions they expect to take on these issues if elected? Some firm pronouncements could produce controversy and controversy could generate public interest and concern. It is this sort of thing that gets the voters to the polls.

In anticipation of just such a campaign, every qualified, unregistered citizen should hie himself to the clerk's office between now and 10 p.m. Saturday night to make himself eligible for next month's primary.

All who miss the preliminaries will be left without grounds for complaint about the alternatives on the November 8 ballot.

Compact Comment

The argument about whether or not American housewives are savvy enough to look out for their own interests in the market place or need a Federal Department of Consumers to do it for them continues.

And from one who opposes such control comes an interesting observation: Whatever she buys, the present-day housewife will sooner or later receive and spend some coins that look like but are not genuine old-style U. S. quarters. That, he protests, is deceptive packaging at its worst!

Somehow the power of the atom is easier to understand after you learn the calorie count for an ounce of fudge.

Nomad Carpets Are Exhibited

The Joseph V. McMullan collection of Oriental rugs will be on view at the Museum of Fine Arts from August 6 until September 4.

Consisting of 50 rugs selected from one of the finest collections still in private hands, the carpets span a period of 400 years from the 16th through the 19th century and range from sophisticated court and mosque rugs to those made by villagers. Mr. McMullan has carefully selected those rugs which show the highest achievement of the rugmaker's art as well as those most representative of the various types of rug. The particular interest of Mr. McMullan's collection lies in its emphasis on the vigorous peasant and nomad carpets rather than on the court types sought by most collectors.

Born in New York City in 1896, and educated there, Joseph V. McMullan later became vice president of a specialty steel mill in Chicago. His interest in the culture of the Islamic world was aroused early in his career and led to the acquisition in 1930 of the first important rug in his collection. Since that time, Mr. McMullan has been active as a collector of Islamic rugs and as a patron of Islamic studies and collections in America. He is an Honorary Research Fellow in Islamic Art at the Fogg Art Museum, Harvard University, Cambridge, Massachusetts, visitor to the Museum of Fine Arts Textile Department, a trustee of the Textile Museum, Washington, D.C., and a benefactor of both the Metropolitan Museum and the Art Institute of Chicago. He has traveled extensively throughout the Middle East and has given many lectures on rugs in various museums and universities.

The Islamic rug (often called Oriental) is an art form exclusive to the people of an area stretching from Egypt to Central Asia. Rugs from all the major areas, ranging in date from approximately 1550 A.D. to 1850 A.D., are represented in this exhibition. The rugs are arranged in groups based on their geographic origin, and within that, on the approximate time of weaving.

There is a wide variety of forms and styles in the show, from the sinuous floral designs of the Persian carpets to the bold geometric patterns to be found in the Turkman rugs. Of the rugs of Persia represented, one of the rarer items is the Ardebil Fragment (no. 7) a piece of the companion rug to the Victoria and Albert Museum's fabulous Ardebil Carpet. Both rugs were damaged, and one was sacrificed to repair the other. This border fragment, with its complete eight-lobed medallion, filled with balanced arabesques and a floral scroll is a perfect microcosm of 16th century Persian rug design.

For one week beginning Aug. 15 Falmouth Playhouse will offer a sampling of the great American burlesque theatre of yesteryear. Sweet and shapely Sherry Britton will function as narrator while a rousing band will beckon forth top bananas, comedians, and the chorus acts which served as the life blood of a red-blooded American theatre for over a century. Aptly titled "The Best of Burlesque," the evening will offer theatregoers a chance to discover what grandpa marveled at and what grandma moaned about.

Franz Lehar's perennial success "The Merry Widow" will open at the North Shore Music Theatre in Beverly Monday. The Beverly theatre will present essentially the same production that was performed to capacity audiences in the New York City Center. Four of the City Center's lead performers will be recreating their roles under the same director and choreographer.

While a village rug, the pattern is worked out with amazing precision, the piece shows freedom of thought on the part of the weaver; there are a number of delicate floral forms dropped in at random, without any particular relationship to the main pattern. They add great charm and individuality to the rug.

One of the characteristics of the so-called Transylvanian rugs from Turkey is their use of architectural details. A red Transylvanian prayer rug (no. 33) is notable for its striking combination of architectural and floral decoration. Slender columns support a triple arch and a gallery resembling the decorative pinnacles of many Muslim buildings. A row of flowers sprouts vertically from the gallery.

The Turkman carpets are the work of the Central Asian Nomads. Usually they are woven on a rich red ground, and their designs are mathematically precise and compactly woven. Often called "coral" or "Princess Bukhara," they take their names: Yomut, Saks, Salor and Afghans from the names of the tribes who manufactured them.

Permit Inspection

Some indication of the new building permit in offsetting the cost of inspection services from Inspector Arthur report for the last 12 months. Fees of $550 were permits for new construction valued at $100,000 in the first half of the year. Only $260 were permits for building.

Increased fees for building and electrical permits approved at the last meeting. The fee for a new construction is now the first $15,000 as of $20. The charges $3 per thousand dollars for every thousand dollars (the old fee was established also at $35).

Boosting the total of July was the permit for a new church at 200 Main Street. The church paid a $444 on the building worth an estimate for the full month of July. $1,025 were collected for new construction or additions valued at $8,235.

Permit Fees Offset Inspection Expenses

Some indication of how effective new building permit fees will be in offsetting the cost of the town's inspection services can be seen from Inspector Arthur Featman's report for the last half of July.

Fees of $550 were collected on permits for new construction projects valued at $190,000, while the first half of the month fees of only $260 were collected on permits for buildings valued at $205,000.

Increased fees for both building and electrical permits were approved at the last regular town meeting. The fee for a permit for new construction is now $35, for the first $15,000 as opposed to an old fee of $20. The town now charges $3 per thousand in additional fees for every thousand over $15,000 (the old fee was $1) and has established also a minimum fee of $35.

Boosting the total for the last half of July was the permit issued for a new church at 278 N. Main St. The church paid a permit fee of $444 on the building which is worth an estimated $148,000. For the full month of July, fees of $1,025 were collected on permits for new construction and alterations or additions valued at $68,295.

Other fees for new construction listed in the last half of the month: 13 Greenwood Rd., J. C. Ryan Construction, dwelling and garage, $20,000; Lot 2, Bannister Rd., Manor Square Realty, dwelling and garage, $22,000.

Additions and alterations, permits issued July 15-29:

1 Stevens St., Wood Ayer Realty, elevator door, $300; 386 Lowell St., Fred Yunggebauer, repairs to existing porch, $750; 32 N. Main St., C. Lincoln Giles, remodel lobby area, $5,000; 105 Chestnut St., Arthur L. Hall, repair and screen porch, $300; 166 Lowell St., A. K. Porter, alterations to barn, $300; 39 Gould Rd., Edward Homer, additions to porch, $800; 13 Glen Meadow St., Frederick H. Collins, porch - rear yard, $1,000; 37 Tewksbury St., John L. The town is now in a position to enforce stricter regulations on the parking of unregistered cars in Andover.

A new bylaw passed by Town Meeting last March, is now effective. It permits just one unregistered car to be parked at any given location, and that car must be concealed from both the public and abutters. Previous regulations permitted the parking of two unregistered vehicles.

Collector Loans Cut Glass For Early American Exhibit

An Andover collector has loaned 25 choice pieces of 18th to 20th Century cut glass for the National Early American Glass Club Exhibition, now underway at the famed Old Slater Mill Museum, Pawtucket, R. I.

Mrs. Fay H. Elliott, 84 Summer St., who has lectured for the National Early American Glass Club, is one of a number of collectors from the club to loan hundreds of examples of early blown and pressed glass, cut glass, art glass, paper weights and rare Sandwich, Portland, Tiffany, Pairpoint, Pittsburgh and Steuben pieces for the exhibit.

The 2,000-member national organization meets monthly from October through May in the hall of Boston's historic Park Street Church.

The exhibition, which was set up by Mrs. John E. Johnson of Pawtucket, curator of the Museum; Miss Dorothy-Lee Jones of Wellesley Hills, Mass., and Douglas Hill, Maine president of the National Early American Glass Club, and Mrs. Robert H. Lawson of Pawtucket, a former president, and her committee is the third in which the club has participated and continues through August 28.

The Museum, built in 1793 by Samuel Slater and standing on its original site overlooking the Blackstone River, was the country's first cotton mill. Its permanent exhibition re-creates the story of the progress of America's textile industry from the home manufacture of old to the very factory itself.

Located on Pawtucket's Roosevelt Ave., and easily accessible by car, bus or train, the Museum is ideal for a day's excursion. It is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays, from 2 to 5 p.m. on Sundays, and is closed on Mondays. There is no admission charge.

West Boxford, Mrs. Albert Carlsson of York Harbor, Maine, and Mrs. Gordon Lewis of Melrose were the bridesmaids. They wore pink crepe gowns with white lace bodices and carried baskets of pink and white chrysanthemums.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Lord chose a street length beige brocade dress with pink accessories. The mother of the bridegroom wore an aqua ensemble with matching accessories.

Dr. Philip Gangi of Methuen was best man for his brother. The ushers were Gary Lord of Andover, brother of the bride, Donald Allard of Methuen, and Joseph Soudet and Raymond DiFiore, both of Lawrence.

The couple went to Miami and West Palm Beach, Fla. on their wedding trip.

"At full throttle in our motorboat, we ran over a water-soaked log. It struck the propeller shaft and tore the outboard right off the back of the boat... the motor sank to the bottom. Our motor boating sank to the bottom too (we had no insurance). Does motor and boat insurance often cost only $10 or $20?"

Memorial Hall Library

Margaret Lane Returns
For Turkish Story Hour

Miss Margaret Lane, formerly children's librarian at Memorial Hall Library, will be the special guest story-teller in the children's room on Tuesday, Aug. 23, at 2 p.m. All children of school age are especially invited to be present.

Miss Lane's program will be Turkish Hodja (pronounced HOJA) stories which have been handed down for generations in Turkey. Hodja is a popular folk character whose name means teacher and judge. Nevertheless the dominant note in the stories is humor which laughs at a character affectionately. The Hodja has an inclination toward practical jokes and a talent for getting into trouble. Tales from the Hodja abound in humor and wit which appeal to children of all ages.

Some of Miss Lane's patrons in the children's room may recall happily a similar program she conducted before leaving for her new assignment in Turkey three years ago. Since 1963 she has been the librarian at the American School for Girls in Ushkudar. She is enjoying a New England vacation and is renewing associations in Andover and Boxford.

Children's Room Display

The exhibit in the children's room during the month of August is inspired by the large collection of seashells it owns. Books about shells and the animals who used to inhabit them, other books about the seashore, its plants and fish are also on display. Books which will appeal to the very young and also to the more knowledgeable are included and may be taken home by borrowers.

On Vacation

Vacationing staff members include Mrs. Kenneth Vint, Assistant Librarian, Miss Elizabeth Russell, Supervisor of Children's Services and Henry Wyatt, Head Shelver. A post card from Miss Russell tells of a trip to the home of L. M. Montgomery of "ANNE OF GREEN GABLES" fame in Cavendish, Prince Edward Island.

Did You Know...

- that farming employs 6 million workers - more than the combined employment in transportation, public utilities, the auto industry and the steel industry? That one farm worker produces food, fiber and other farm commodities for himself and 35 others? The U. S. Department of Agriculture says farming is the biggest industry in the U. S. What's more American agriculture has advanced more in the last 50 years than in all the prior years of our history.

Bowen was notified some weeks ago that Civil Service did not agree with his position and that he did not have the authority to make such a provisional appointment without prior CS approval. He appealed this decision to the Federal Health, Education & Welfare office in Boston, but was told that the HEW did not consider it would be appropriate for them to pass on the qualifications of individuals. A major portion of the funds for welfare operations come from the HEW budget.

Bull's departure creates something of an emergency situation at the Andover welfare office. The department is now short "hands," the manager reports. Furthermore, there is not at the moment an eligibility list from which he can hope to hire a director who will meet the relatively new requirements for welfare director.

Bowen said Wednesday that the district welfare director in Lawrence tells him there will be a state-wide competitive examination soon to establish such a list. Miss Irene McCarthy, now a caseworker in the Andover department, expects to take this examination, he said. He explained that a grandfather clause in the new welfare legislation permits certain long-term welfare employees to participate in the competition.

Commenting on the Civil Service action, Manager Bowen said he was disappointed to lose the services of a man of Bull's caliber. The retired colonel holds a BS degree in commerce from the State University of New York and a master's in education from the same university. He served in the European theater of operations during World War II and in his last assignment with the Air Force he was in charge of an ROTC unit at Tulane University.

METER PROJECT IS DELAYED

After previously approving a plan for replacement of all the town's present parking meters, the Board of Selectmen voted unanimously Monday night to hold off on the project.

Selectman Sidney P. Shaw said that since the municipal parking lot on Main Street has not been eliminated as a possible town hall site, he could not agree to having re-metered now.

METER PROJECT IS DELAYED

After previously approving a plan for replacement of all town's present parking meters, the Board of Selectmen unanimously Monday night hold off on the project. Selectman Sidney P. Thibault said that since the municipal parking lot on Main Street has not been eliminated as possible town hall site, he could not agree to having re-metered now.

James W. Burke Jr. had the unique experience recently of being given the Oath of Enlistment for the Regular Army by his father, Major James W. Burke of Andover. Seventeen-year-old Pvt. Burke chose airborne armor as his enlistment option and is already at Fort Gordon, Ga., undergoing basic training. He plans to attend Airborne School at Fort Benning, also in Georgia, where he will earn the Silver Wings of an Army paratrooper and then join a tactical airborne unit in the U. S. or the Republic of Vietnam.

James attended schools in Andover and Texas, the American

High School in Bad Kreuznach, Germany and graduated in 1960 from Fayetteville (N. C.) High School. His goal is to compete for an appointment to the U. S. Military Academy.

Pvt. Burke is the son of Major and Jane (West) Burke, both natives of Andover. Major Burke is division social work officer for the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N. C.

The young soldier's grandparents are M. A. Burke and Myles J. West, both of Andover. His sister Sally is currently visiting with relatives and friends in the Andover area.

Auto Signs Said Illegal

The Registry of Motor Vehicles today issued a warning that political signs, stickers, lights and illuminated signs had been noted in rear windows of many automobiles during recent weeks and that the practice was apparently increasing.

Supervisor Charles Gotgart stated that all such obstructions in rear windows of motor vehicles were in clear violation of sections 7A and 13 of Chapter 90, General Laws, and that violators were subject to suspension of registration and possible court action for such violations.

Gotgart pointed out that the law requires rear windows to afford unobstructed view to the rear and that no obstructions of any kind could be permitted. The illuminated signs were, he said, particularly hazardous for nighttime operation since they not only obstructed rearward vision of the operators but also constituted an interference to other drivers.

The Registry stated that many complaints have been received concerning these political signs and that all law enforcement agencies were being alerted to take necessary action against offenders.

Meteor Show Late Tonight

Tonight's the night when the annual Perseids meteor shower goes into full swing, shooting streaks of light across the heavens like fireworks at a Fourth of July celebration.

Weather permitting, this most reliable of the "shooting star" showers puts on a show well worth skipping one's sleep to see.

It's a late, late show, with the best viewing time — according to the Hayden Planetarium at Boston's Museum of Science — the wee small hours before sunrise. But a wide-awake observer should be able to see up to 40 meteors an hour.

There will be some interference from the 26-day-old moon, which rises at 1 a.m., although not as much as from the full moon of last year.

When the Perseids shower reaches its height on a clear, moonless night, an observer can expect to see about 50 meteor streaks an hour.

Ordinarily, the Perseids is the number-one shower of the year. But on November 16 and 17 of this year it will be upstaged by another, known as the Leonids shower. Every 33 years the earth crosses the concentrated, mid-section of the Leonids meteor swarm, beating the Perseids shower all hollow! So with good viewing conditions next November, observers may have the rare thrill of seeing at least 100 meteors an hour flashing by.

Meteors, the Boston Planetarium explains, are particles of iron and stone whizzing into the earth's atmosphere at the average speed of 100,000 miles per hour and burning up by friction with the air. What the observer sees are the streaks of light caused by their passage — and not the particles themselves.

•Aurand Harris' national prize winning play for children will be presented Thursday Aug. 18 at the North Shore Music Theatre in Beverly. "Rags to Riches" was selected from a group of sixty plays in a nation-wide contest sponsored by the North Shore Community Arts Foundation. The story is based on the writings of Horatio Alger and relates the adventures of a poor-but-honest orphan boy, Ragged Dick. Because of his honesty Dick is befriended by a wealthy banker and his lovely daughter Ida. Ida sets about to help Dick and teach him to read.

For safe boating throughout the season keep away from other boats on the water, cautions Wilton Vaughn, State Director of Motorboats. Massachusetts has room for all of its 90,000 registered motorboats of five horsepower or more. There is in this state 1,980 miles of coastline on the Atlantic Ocean, 4,230 miles of rivers, and 1,100 lakes and ponds. Who could ask for anything more?
